

SCHOOL TRANSPORTATION AWARENESS TRAINING

This critical training need involves how to manage safety issues on the bus to protect students from threats from both within and outside of the bus. School Transportation Safety Awareness Training is designed to increase school transportation staff awareness of critical transportation security vulnerabilities and other issues. More specifically, the training aims to promote awareness and preparedness. STSA focuses on terrorist and criminal threats to school buses, bus passengers and destination facilities. Hence, it is designed to provide school bus drivers, administrators, and staff members with information that will enable them to effectively identify and report perceived security threats, as well as the skills to appropriately react and respond to a security incident should it occur.

STSA topics include:

- Terrorism Defined
- Who Are Terrorists?
- Define And Identify A Security Threat
- Define And Identify A Security Incident
- Potential Weapons And The Probability Of Use
- The latest trends in school violence threats to safety
- The impact of terrorism on school security and transportation services
- School buses as potential targets of terrorism.

To inquire about the availability of STSA, please contact North Carolina Department of Public Instruction:

Derek Graham, Chief Consultant
919- 807- 3571

Dr. John Leak, Consultant
919- 609-5777
John_Leak @ dpi.state.nc.us